4. RELEVANT POLICIES

Block operates the following policies, which apply to all entities in the Block Group, that describe its approach to the identification of modern slavery risks and steps to be taken to prevent slavery and human trafficking in its operations:

- Code of Business Conduct and Ethics: This policy requires all Block employees, officers and directors to identify and prevent modern slavery practices from being incorporated in Block's supply chain. Employees are required to undergo a training and attestation of compliance with this policy on an annual basis. Employees, officers and directors are expected to report any potential violations, and they are provided with the opportunity to do so anonymously.
- Supplier Code of Conduct and Business Ethics: This policy requires all suppliers of products and services to Block, including consulting firms, independent contractors, staffing agencies and licensees ("Block Suppliers"), to identify and prevent modern slavery practices from being incorporated in Block's supply chain. Block Suppliers are expected to report any potential violations, and they are provided with the opportunity to do so anonymously.

- Vendor Management Policy: This policy sets forth a risk based approach for reviewing and assessing risks from third party vendors to Block, including our manufacturing vendors and staffing agency partners.

5. RISK ASSESSMENT AND DUE DILIGENCE PROCESSES TO ADDRESS SLAVERY AND HUMAN TRAFFICKING IN OUR OPERATIONS AND SUPPLY CHAIN

We have a multi-tiered vendor risk management program to review and assess risks to Block and its customers, which further supports the ongoing risk assessments of our regulated subsidiaries in Australia, the U.K. and Canada, in particular.

Block expects that our suppliers will not tolerate any form of exploitation in their business or any part of their supply chain. Block Supplier evaluation and selection may include an assessment of each Block Supplier's business practices and corporate values.

The following activities are considered to be at high risk of causing, contributing to or being directly linked to slavery or human trafficking:

- Misuse of Block's financial products and services: Block's business is subject to a wide range of laws and regulations in the jurisdictions in which it operates including AML/CTF (Anti-Money Laundering / Countering the Financing of Terrorism) legislation¹ as well as U.S. Treasury Department's Office of Foreign Assets Control and applicable sanctions requirements. In turn, Block follows the international framework proposed by the Financial Action Task Force and refers to guidance produced by the Joint Money Laundering Steering Group in the U.K.. Block's applicable UK regulated subsidiaries must also comply with applicable AML/CFT legislation and the relevant parts of the Financial Conduct Authority handbook for firms. Block's Australian subsidiaries are variously subject to oversight by the Australian Securities and Investments Commission, the Australian Prudential Regulation Authority, and reporting to the Australian Transaction Reports and Analysis Centre and Block's applicable Canadian regulated subsidiaries are similarly subject to oversight by the Financial Transactions and Reports Analysis Centre of Canada in respect of Canadian AML/CTF legislation. Block is committed to developing, implementing and maintaining an effective, risk based AML/CTF Program, which is reasonably designed to prevent Block from being used to facilitate money laundering, which could be used to finance human trafficking or other modern slavery practices. Block implements a risk-based approach in countering the risks posed to Block and the ecosystem in which Block operates, including modern slavery practices. Risk assessment and management is an ongoing process conducted both at the subsidiary and group levels and is continuously evaluated so that the greatest resources are assigned appropriately to those areas that pose the greatest risk.
- Labor practices of our contingent workforce: Block utilizes contingent workers to support its business operations in Block's physical offices, remotely, and through business process outsourcing arrangements. All Block Suppliers are expected to conduct business in accordance with this Block Ethics Code, including instituting appropriate policies and practices, and communicating and enforcing the provisions of the Block Ethics Code throughout their organization and across their supply chains and subcontractors. The Block Ethics Code includes specific requirements for fair working practices, lawful wages, and requirements that Block Suppliers not engage in forced or child labor.
- Supply chain risk: Block Suppliers are global and diverse. In addition to the Block Ethics Code, Block requires its hardware suppliers to comply with the Supplier Code of Conduct and Ethics, which includes more specific and rigorous requirements for all manufacturing Block Suppliers.

Block further employs a multi-tiered vendor management risk process for evaluating indirect vendor risk, that includes:

- Risk assessment and ratings to facilitate efficient risk-based oversight and monitoring;
- Initial due diligence prior to the start of the vendor relationship and contracting;
- Contract structuring and review;
- Ongoing oversight and monitoring of vendors; and

¹ May also be referred to as AML/CTF based on local legislation.

- Offboarding processes to ensure appropriate activities are completed when terminating a vendor relationship.

We have a cross-functional Third Party Risk Management team, which comprise of representatives from:

- Legal;
- Third Party Risk Management (Procurement);
- Third Party Relationship Owners;
- Risk subject matter experts (business continuity and disaster recovery, compliance, finance, information security); and
- Local management teams and board of director oversight in Australia, Canada and the U.K.

6. MEASURING OUR EFFECTIVENESS IN COMBATING SLAVERY AND HUMAN TRAFFICKING & OUR CONSULTATION PROCESS

Block understands that reducing the risk of modern slavery and human trafficking in its business and supply chains is an important goal that requires the development of targeted policies and procedures, training, and ongoing iterations of existing policies and procedures, to continually renew its commitment to this noble goal. Currently, Block conducts annual audits of its two main hardware manufacturers, and these audits evaluate them in part based on their labor practices, including their non-use of forced labor and child labor. We may request that other Block Suppliers provide us with a self-assessment as to their adherence to the standards and principles of the Supplier Code of Conduct.

Based on Block's assessment of its supply chain, it did not identify any instances of child or forced labor. Accordingly, no further specific steps were required to remediate child or forced labor or the loss of income associated with remediation efforts.

We are continuing to develop appropriate policies to review, measure and mitigate the risks of modern slavery practices in our business and across our supply chain.

This statement was prepared in consultation with Block's Australian Reporting Entities, and the entries they own or control (as outlined in Annexure A).

7. AMENDMENTS
